LONDON, Nov. 17 (NYT) .--Roy Jenkins narrowly survived a strong challenge from angry left-wingers today to win re-election as deputy leader of Britain's

However, the bliter election, conducted among Laborite members of Parliament, left the party members deeply divided under Harold Wilson's continuing lead-

Mr. Jenkins, 61, former chancellor of the exchequer and a politician of demonstrable principle and ability, was objectionable to many party members on two counts.

First, he had defied the official party line and sided with the Conservative government in approving in principle the terms negotiated by the Conservatives for British membership in the European Economic Community, or Common Market.

Second, he appears alien to the pronounced leftwing trend in the Labor party as evidenced at the recent Trades Union Congress and Labor party conferences, Mr Wilson, as prime minister,

But Mr. Jenkins clung to his earlier position of support and inspired many colleagues to join him. In the vote, 69 Labor members of the House of Commons joined 282 Conservatives in favor of the market motion and 20 other Laborites abstained.

The left wing of the party was incensed at Mr. Jenkins even though Mr. Wilson took a more moderate personal view and let it be known he would like Mr. Jenkins to continue as his dep-

Last year, in a similar contest for the deputy leadership, Mr. Jenkins defeated Mr. Foot with an overall majority on the first ballot of 133. Mr. Foot, 58-yearold member for the Welsh coalmining constituency of Ebbw Vale, had 67 and Fred Peart, another market opponent, had 48.

Last week, the balloting gave
Mr. Jenkins 140, just two shy of an outright majority needed, to 96 for Mr. Foot and 46 for Anthony Wedgwood Benn, who had also opposed the market. Under the rules, Mr. Benn dropped out, and it was expected that his votes would be divided between Mr. Jenkins and Mr. Foot. But there were more abstentions today. Mr. Jenkins held fast and Mr. Foot's total

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP-DJ).-The Commerce Department has approved another 54 export licenses authorizing U.S. companies to ship industrial equipment valued at about $528 million to the Soviet Union for the Kama River truck factory project.

Commerce Department officials said today the export licenses cover machine tools, metal-cutting equipment, mechanical presses. and a wide range of other tools which the Russians may purchase from U.S. manufacturers.

The department previously authorized export licenses valued at about $442 million for foundry equipment, suitable for use at the Kama River factory. Moscow plans to begin production of heavy duty diesel trucks, with separate manufacturing operations for diesel engines,

Nixon Signs Defense Bill, Will Ignore War Cutoff

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (IHT). -President Nixon today signed into law a $21.3 billion defense procurement bill with a blunt decaration that he will ignore the provision urging him to set a linal date for removal of all U.S. forces from Indochina.

That amendment, eponsored by Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, "is without hinding force or effect," the President said in a statement, "and it does not reflect my judg-ment about the way the war should be brought to a conclusion."

The House of Representatives meanwhile rejected a June 1 cutoff of all U.S. Indochina war

Backing the President's appeal to put no restrictions on his effort for a negotiated settlement, the House voted, 238 to 134, against an amendment to halt the war money. The amendment was on the defense appropriations bill.

Told of the President's blast, Sen. Mansfield, a leading Vict-nam-war critic, snorted, 'It may be ignored, but it will be in the back of his mind." He reminded newsmen that the Senate has adopted his troop-withdrawal proposal in some form four different times in the past and predicted that it "will have more than [a cat's] nine lives if neces-SOLY."

The military procurement bill, which authorizes continued con-struction on the anti-ballistic missile system as well as other development programs, also contains a provision canceling the President's authority to bar U.S. imports of chrome from Rhodesia.

Congressional adoption of that amendment prompted a United Nations resolution yesterday ex-pressing "grave concern" and calling on the U.S. government to continue the embargo on Rhodesian chrome in compliance with UN sanctions against the white breakaway government.

White House Press Secretary Ron Ziegler noted that the Rhodesian chrome amendment does not take effect until January, 1972, and told reporters the President will neither act nor comment on the matter while negotiations are going on between Britain and the Rhodesian government on the dispute that caused the colony's breakaway.

British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home is in Salisbury pursuing the negotiations and was reported yesterday to feel the U.S. congressional action undercut London's bargaining power. In rejecting the Mansfield amendment the President took the occasion to restate the ad-ministration's Vietnam policy;

"Our goal—and my hope—is a negotiated settlement providing for the total withdrawal of all foreign forces, including our own, for the release of all prisoners and for a cease-fire throughout

"In the absence of such a settlement, or until such a settlement is reached, the rate of withdrawal of U.S. forces will be determined by three factors: by the level of enemy activity, by the progress of our program of Vletnamization, and by progress toward obtaining the release of all our prisoners wherever they are in Southeast Asia, and toward obtaining a cease-fire for all of Southeast Asia."

that he was cutting the U.S troop ceiling for Vletnam to 129,000 men by Feb. 1-a reduction of 45,000—and said he wili issue another statement concerning further withdrawais shortly before then. In his statement on the Mansfield amendment, the President than assist in the search for negotiated settlement" on Vietnam. At the same time, Mr. Laird described as an "iffy question" whether U.S. troops would be used in any such action. "That is not part of our Vietnamization program," he added.

Mr. Laird was questioned at an unannounced news conference at the Pentagon about the future use of U.S. air power and the degree of a potential Communist

Asked whether U.S. planes would be sent to support any new South Vietnamese ground assault against the Ho Chi Minh Trail, as was done early this year, Mr. Laird said:

"We still have the capability as far as air is concerned and I wouldn't hesitate to use it." He said, "I would not hesitate to recommend the use of our airpower" during the troop withdrawal period against Communist targets in North Victnam, Laos, Cambodia or against Communist troop concentrations in South Vietnam " if I find that the security of our forces is in jeopardy. As for ground troops, Congress has decreed that U.S. forces may not be sent into either Cambodia or Laos.

U.S. ground combat power is now down to the point where there is only one Army division, plus some miscellaneous units, available for operations in Vietnam. But Mr. Huang did not attack the United States. American sources said that the Originally, the Mansfield pro-posal would have set a pullout target date six months after it was signed into law, provided U.S. captives were released. But even dropping the specific deadline did not make the bill palatable to the President.

He said the provision "expres a judgment about the manner in which the American involvement in the war should be ended." "However," he said, "it is with-ont binding force or effect, and It does not reflect my judgment about the way in which the war should be brought to a conclusion. "My signing of the bill that contains this section, therefore, will not change the policies I have pursued and that I shall con-tinue to pursue toward this end." Other anti-war senators besides Sen. Mansfield promptly challenged Mr. Nixon's decision. One, Sen. Frank Church, D., Idaho, said the amendment is "part of the law and as such is not subject to dismissal by the President." He said Congress should adopt enforcement provisions with the power of the purse strings to back up its stated policy on troop withdrawals. Sen. Church told a news conference he and Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R., Ky., will offer a measure to force the President to heed the Mansfield provision. He said their proposal would limit spending in Southeast Asia said would be conditioned on release of all POWs.

The new Cooper-Church measure, a reoffering of the previous troop-wthdrawal amendment defeated by the Senate; may be offered as an amendment to the $71-billion military appropria-tions bill. The Senate version is still in the Finance Committee. Some Capitol sources said President Nixon is clearly defying Congrese will by choosing to flout the Mansfield amendment. There appeared to be new senti-ment building for another challenge to the administration on

Iraq's President Calls on All Arabs To War on Israel

President Ahmed Hassan al-Bakr of Iraq tonight called for a war of popular liberation by the Arab states against Israel as the only way of recovering occupied Arab territory and rights in Palestine. He said that allied efforts at peaceful settlement in the Middle East should be abandoned, and that military plans worked out by Arab kings and presidents at a summit conference in Tripoli, Libya, in June last year, should be put into effect.

The 58-year-old president spoke at a two-hour newe conference in Baghdad attended by a large number of Arab and foreign correspondents who were flown in erday from Beirut and other Arab countries by chartered Irani government aircraft. An account of the conference has been given by the official Iraq news agency. The main purpose of the conference was to publicize a "Char-ter of National Action" under which other leftist groups in Iraq as well as the Kurdish Democratic party are supposed to join

U.S. Planes Hit Hanoi Tro Ra Converging on Phnom P PHNOM PENH, Nov. 17 (UPI).

-Major North Vietnamese forces were reported converging on Phnom Penh today in what captured documents said was an effort to seize or isolate the capital. The advancing troops were under heavy U.S. air attacks, which have killed an estimated 200 North Vietnamese.

While government reinforce-ments poured into the capital. four Russian-made 122-mm rock ets slammed into Phnom Penh'a airport today in an apparent North Vietnamese attempt to sever communications. One of the rockets hit the airfield and another wounded four persons.

A. squadron of government tanks was sent to the southwest and fresh troops were setting up camo on the city's outskirts. Soldiers were seen digging foxholes on the lawns of the university, midway between the city center and the sirport.

$40 Million Suit Over Youth Fares $oldsymbol{D}$ ismisse $oldsymbol{d}$ in $oldsymbol{U.S.}$

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (Reuters). —A $40 million damage suit against Atlantic air carriers which gave students reduced summer rates was dismissed by a U.S. District Court here yesterday for lack of jurisdiction.

Turning down the claim made by two men, Judge Murray Gur-feln found that court precedent involving international agreements prevented him from accepting jurisdiction of the case. In addition, the court found that the plaintiffs, Louis Danna and Robert Esler, who had objected to the reduced rates for the students to Paris and London during the summer months, had not suffered any damages.

Their complaint is not that they pay too much but the youths pay too little," Judge Gurfein said. "If the airlines had not filed the youth fares at all, the plaintiffs would have paid the

The plaintiffs had complained ir suit that they paid $599 round-trip fare from New York to Paris, while the youths paid only $220 for the same trip, and the round trip to London cost them $552 (£239) but only $210

sent an expert professional delegation led by Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuanhua, a Chou En-lai protege who has a prewar German Ph.D. and much diplomatic experience and who came to the Security Council in 1950 to protest the United Nations role in Korea.

Mr. Chiao, in his first speech, took the traditional line of identifying the strengthening of the UN with the satisfaction of his own country's national interest in that forum. Nicely tuning his message to the medium, he made a big play for the "Third World" nations of Asia, Africa and Latin America—they constitute the organization's majority. Even while exulting in the defeat of American efforts to retain a seat for Taiwan, he insisted that the superpowers must not "manipulate and monopolize" the UN.

It has long been an internationalist truism that major world problems can't be solved without the participation of China. No one has cause to be sanguine. Now that Peking has a voice, a vote-and a veto-at the UN, it will be able to have that much more influence in the various problems tended to at the UN. Let there be no doubt about it: Essentially China wants to re-cut the world power pie to give itself and its chosen friends a larger slice. Far from giving lower priority to that goal in order to get along at the UN, it has entered the UN to advance that goal. To have Peking's representatives at close hand doubtless will make consulta-

To open its United Nations mission Peking tion more convenient in the crises sure to come. But in the interludes between crises. it will facilitate Peking's push against the world establishment.

There is nothing especially frightening about this for the United States. We are not without the resources to care for our own legitimate interests. Moreover, the symptom should not be confused with the cause: It is not China's UN membership which requires that it be dealt into the routine of international diplomacy but its existence, size and gathering power.

Still, there's a problem, which is Only hinted at by the angry reaction in some onarters to Peking's entry and Taiwan's expulsion and, this week, to Mr. Chiao's speech. Already the United States was tending to take less of its international business to the UN. China's arrival doubtless will create pressures to confirm this tendency. But this would be a major error. More than any other nation, the United States needs a smoothworking effective international system. The global character of our political and economic interests makes this so, regardless of how we are treated on any one passing

Some will say that the UN and the Chinese deserve each other. But a responsible U.S. President will move in an opposite direction—toward reaffirmation of the UN's value to America, toward active efforts to reform its finances and procedures, and toward more extensive use of its forums and

Mr. Nixon's Vietnam Strategy

President Nixon's developing Vietnam strategy increases the risk of indefinite American involvement in an unending Indochina war. While the President added nothing fundamentally to the old policy mix by his announcement of a withdrawal target of 45,000 troops over the next months, his press conference remarks tend to confirm fears about where he is heading.

The President made repeated references to his continuing desire for a negotiated settlement, hinting at "other channels" than the Paris talks and possible Chinese or . Soviet "assistance" with Hanoi, but he made no new move to re-activate the direct channel he already has to Hanoi in Paris. Nor dld he make any effort to respond to the openings offered in July by the Viet Cong's seven-point proposal, which has remained largely unanswered for more than four Counterproposals are needed at Paris that face up to the real issue: What kind of coinpromise political settlement can be arrived at? Short of that, private talks could be opened with Hanoi by setting a final withdrawal date conditional on serious negotiations for concurrent release of prisoners and achievement of a cease-fire. The implication would be that agreement must be reached before American forces were reduced below some minimum "residual force" level.

Instead, Mr. Nixon has announced his intention to maintain a residual force without making any negotiating advance. If anything, he has stiffened his negotiating objectives as well as his tactics. Instead of the "reasonable chance" for survival that he previously sought for the Thien regime, Mr. Nixon now appears to be seeking a greater degree of certainty that South Vietnam "will be able to defend itself from a Communist

It is to achieve this greater assurance of a non-Communist South Vietnam in the future that Mr. Nixon now for the first time has flatly and publicly committed himself to the concept of an American "residual force." In addition, as long as the war goes on, Mr. Nixon has committed himself to continued use of American airpower on a large scale. The re-engagement of American ground forces in a crisis clearly would not be ruled out either.

The two tracks of Vietnamization and negotiation in Mr. Nixon's policy remain inherently contradictory. It is the failure to face up to that contradiction that has led to the present impasse.

Vietnamization requires strengthening the Saigon government to take over the main role in a continuing war. A negotiated settlement to end the war involves replacement of the Thieu regime with some compromise arrangement acceptable to both

President Thieu, unwilling to risk sharing political power with his non-Communist opponents, is unlikely on his own to take the even greater risks of a political settlement with the Communists, Mr. Nixon, too, has been unwilling to face the risks in the latter course. He has seen negotiations so far as a means of accepting the surrender of the

Another chance will come in January. The two-month troop withdrawal schedule just announced would appear to be a holding action to get Mr. Nixon through his Peking visit. In the likely event that this visit does not produce a Vietnam solution, Mr. Nixon can still take the negotiating course he avoided last week by opening private talks with Hanoi in Paris.

India's Brinkmanship

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi'a carefully chosen words, following her return from a tour of Western capitals, indicates that at least the top government leaders in Delhi wish to exhaust every possibility of settling the conflict with Pakistan peacefully. But the chances for this are growing steadily slimmer. Mrs. Gandhi emphasized that Indian troops will not be withdrawn from the Pakistan borders as long as the problem of "Bangla Desh" has not been solved. Thus a further escalation remains a possibility.

On the one hand India wishes to force the major powers to act, but at the same time it is inclined to give increased support to the East Bengal guerrillas. This kind of brinkmanship would surely result in a largescale military conflict if Pakistan were to find the situation unbearable. The time for a peaceful settlement is also running out because the East Bengal secessionists are becoming increasingly impatient.

If Yahya Khan succeeds in his plan to establish a constitutional government, no matter how rigged and undemocratic the extra elections may be, the world at large would be able to turn its attention away from the subject of "Bangla Desh" for a long time. But if, in order to prevent this, the East Pakistani guerrillas launch a major offensive. India and Pakistan would inevitably move much closer to a state of all-

-From Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich). Nixon's Vietnam Strategy

Mr. Nixon availed himself of the occasion to try to define a little more the still vague doctrine that bears his name. He contrasted the direct involvement of the U.S. in Vietnam with the military and financial support given by Washington to Cambodia. This amounts to saying: "No ground war in Asia." This is the old slogan forged after the Korean war. But how can Mr. Nixon pretend to forget the fact that only American intervention on the ground was able to "save" South Korea and to prevent a total rout in South Vietnam in 1965?

The Forgotten Battle for Votes

It is in these quiet periods, even before the presidential primary elections, when the hard work of organization and registration is done. And if you watch the back pages of the newspapers, you will see considerable evidence of this careful preliminary foundation

Almost without notice, for example, the legislatures in most of the large states have been passing bills to permit the newly enfranchised 11 million 18-21 yearolds to vote next November on campus, rather than at the place of their parents' residence. This could make a difference of several million votes, and in a few key states, could tip the balance to one party or the other.

Also, there is a move on here in the Democratic-controlled Congress to pass legislation that would enable voters to register by mail, and this, too, would un-doubtedly increase the size of the vote substantially and probably favor the Democratic presidential

Spending Reform

Much will depend, too, on the outcome of the current battle on Capitol Hill over campaign epending reform. The present system, by general agreement, is not only a scandal but a disgrace. The only trouble is that it will probably be decided by men who have managed to get to Cougress under this outrageous system, and it is not at all sure at this moment that the reform will go through.

What is going on in these rather dull, scattered, and technical debates over election spendind and registration is really the critical strategic battle of the campaign. These things are going to set the stage for the big drama They are going to later on.

And the interesting paradox at the moment is that even the young people with the most education on the intricate American federal and electoral system, and with the most energy and the loudest grievances, are not really very active in these preliminary battles. Some of them are, of course, but most of them are "waiting for the election." Though what is going on right now in these seemingly dreary nuts and bolts debates could actually de-cide the election.

The election is flat and dull on the surface precisely because the candidates are working underground on the substructure of the campaign. They are not polishing sentences, but organizing teams and gathering funds. That is what this phase of a presidential election campaign is all about, and it is far too important to be left merely to the candidates and their staffs, and the organized lobbies.

Labor's Role

Labor's political activity these days illustrates the point. George Meany, the president of the American Federtaion of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, is very active on the propaganda front. But big labor is too experienced to stop there. The White House and the Republican National Committee are doing the same thing. They are raising funds—over $5 million this week in a series of GOP closedcircuit television dinners. They are quietly blocking legislation for campaign expenditure reform, while seeming to support it, and trying to limit the registration of the new young voters, while proclaiming in their propaganda sheet the new "alliance of the generations."

Against this kind of professional organizing, the young protestors and even the disenchanted Common Cause people's lobby seem woefully inadequate. The occupancy and policies of the White House are not going to he changed by demonstrations against Vietnam in front of the President's house, no matter how sincere. The battleground has

The battleground is now, and for the next few months will be, on the problems of organization, registretion, and campaign financial reform, and on this ground, the new rising enfranchised generation has immense potential political power. But, or so it seems here, they have misjudged the question and the time,

They are walting for some candidate to emerge with a new philosophy for the coming age, and maybe it will happen, but probably it won't, and meanwhile, organization and money will be decisive in the end. That is why, in this flat and dull period on the surface, what is going on underneath is so important. The politicians are paying attention to the details and the rules of the election. Absentee Rate Is Rising

Call of the Hustings Is Heard in the Senate

By Spencer Rich and Joan Spiegel

WASHINGTON.—On the evening of Oct. 29, when the Senate surprised the nation by defeating the foreign aid bill, four of the seven Democratic senators most prominently mentioned as potential presidential nominees missed the vote.

They were out campaigning: Edmund S. Muskie, D., Maine, after a day of speechmaking all over New York State, was taping a TV talk show with Dick Cavett; Henry M. Jackson, D., Wash., after a whirlwind tour in Florida, was making a speech at Stetson University; Hubert H. Humphrey, D., Minn., was speaking to the United Auto Workers in Milwaukee, and George S. McGovern, D., S.D., was completing a round of speeches in New Hampshire.

The absence of four of the top Democratic hopefuls helped to appeared to be a disastrous foreign-policy defeat for President Nixon. Four days later, Vice-President Agnew blasted the absent Democratic hopefuls for having "ducked the issues" and having "lacked the courage to even cast a vote on foreign aid from the floor of the Senate. Mr. Agnew got his facts a little wrong; he included Sen. Kennedy in his attack as an absentee although the Massachusetts senator was present in the Senate and had cast his ballot in favor of the aid program. But Sen. Kennedy had then withdrawn it to give a "live pair" to the absent Ernest F. Hollings, D., S.C.

Agnew's Record

Mr. Agnew also neglected to mention that he himself had been absent from the chamber, although his sole constitutional duty as Vice-President is to preside over the Senate and to cast a vote in the event of a tie. Mr. Agnew, who has actually been present and presiding in Senate less than 20 hours this year, out of nearly 1,000 hours of Senate meeting-time, was in turn attacked a few days later by Sen. Hollings because Vice-President Agnew "did not have guts enough to be around to carry out his constitutional duties 90 percent of the time." The exchange of charges over the foreign aid bill may be dismissed as a little over-eager politicking on both sides, since bill was beaten 41 to 27 and the presence of all the Democratic candidates plus Mr. Agnew wouldn't have made the slightest difference in the outcome.

But it does serve to point up a problem that could become more intense over the next year as the presidential primaries begin and the campaign starts up in earnest: absenteeism among potential

Sen. Muskie, Sen. Jackson, Sen. Humphrey and Sen. McGovern undoubtedly will be taking more and more time off from the Senate to campaign.

So far, however, despite the statement from Vice-President Agnew and comments from a few other Republicans about Democratic absenteeism, these four senators and Sen. Kennedy have actually missed relatively few rollcall votes this year compared to the average senator who isn't running for President.

And according to figures compiled by The Washington Post through Nov. 11, the same holds true of Rep. Wilbor D. Mills. D. Ark, a House aspirant for the Democratic nomination, and Rep. Paul McCloskey, R., Calif. who is seeeking the GOP nomina-

The figures show that Sen. Kennedy, who steadfastly insists that he is not running, has been present for 81 percent of the 270 roll calls taken in the Senate from the start of the session through Nov. 11. This is actually a little better attendance record than the 77 percent figure that was scored by all members of the Senate on all 1970 roll-call votes.

76% for Humphrey

Sen. Humphrey, this year, has scored 76 percent—about the same as last year's average for all senators—while Sen. McGovern is at 67 percent, Sen, Muskie at 65 percent and Sen Jackson at 64 percent

In the House, Rep. McCloskey was present for 80 percent of the roll calls and Rep. Mills for 75 percent. (Sen. McGovern's figure excludes votes taken while he was ill during one three-week period.) The candidates have been able to make these relatively high scores, despite furious speechmaking and campaigning all over the nation for many months, because most votes in both the House and Senate take place on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday. This leaves four days of the seven-day week for campaigning.

Voters sometimes resent absenteeism on the part of their senators, but the tradition is that a candidate seeking the presidency or engaged in a crucial race for a Senate seat should make as many of the important votes as he can, but is entitled to some absenteeism to pursue the office.

Thus, when Sen. John F. Kennedy, D., Mass., was seeking the presidential nomination in 1960 by compaigning in one presidential primary after another, he missed 65 percent of the Senate roll calls for that year. And in 1964, the GOP presidential nominee, Sen Barry Goldwater, R., Ariz, missed 72 percent of the roll calls.

The Senate majority leader, Mike Mansfield of Montana, defended the absentee record of the Democratic hopefuls, although he is one man who—as the person responsible for seeing that the Senate gete its business done-deeply hates absenteeism in gen-

"Absenteeism is bad for the business of the Senate," Sen. Mansfield said. "But there is no way to develop a viable candidate for President than if the man works at it."

Based on precedent and custom, there is a need to go out to the localities," Sen. Mansfield

No Other Way

Sen. Mansfield said that it is desirable under the American democratic system for each party to develop a strong candidate in touch with the feelings of the nation and there is no way to do this except for the potential nominces-whatever their jobs, whether they are senators, governors or businessmen-to put aside their regular work for part of the time in order to campaign.

Sen. Mansfield said the absentee problem in the Senate hasn't been so much with presidential hopefuls as with others who are not hopefuls. On the day on which he was speaking, for example, only Sen. Muskie and Sen. Mc-Govern among the hopefuls were absent. Six other Democrats and 11 Republicans also were absent

"There is no other way to develop an opposition candidate," Sen. Humphrey said in an interview. "I try to be here for all crucial votes, really big votes, when they are close. I'm always reminded of John Kennedy, who saw fit to run in 1960 while I stayed here and campaigned from the Senate" for the Democratic nomination. Kennedy trounced Sen. Humphrey and went on to win the presidency.

"There's no way to avoid it if you want to run seriously," Sen. Jackson said. "Kennedy went through this, Nixon and Agnew as Vice-Presidents were absent all the th for the country. Our presidential system couldn't work if candidates didn't take time to campaign."

Sen. Jackson said that now that Congress was beginning to meet all year round, instead of packing it up in July as it did in former years, "you'd have to exclude all members of Congress as potential nominees if you insisted" they be present for all votes.

"Agnew is some person to criticize us-he's supposed to be presiding and he's running all over the world."

Sen. Fred R. Harris, D., Okla., who has now withdrawn from the Democratic presidential scramble. missed 60 percent of this year's votes while away campaigning earlier this year. "It's distressing to have to miss roll calls." Sen. Harris said, "but it's good for the country to have five or six men contesting for the nomination."

The Senate minority leader. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, agreed that a viable candidacy couldn't be mounted by a senator without some absences.

"By and large," he said, "they do more running around than they need to do. They ought to put their presence in the Senate first most of the time. They certainly are risking the fate of some bills by their absence."

Sen. Scott also said that presidential hopefuls who stay away campaigning much of the time are also taking a big gamble. If they fail to get the nomination, but pile np a big absentee recorthey are vulnerable to political attack at home later on by a future opponent either in their own party or from the other party when they run for re-election to the Senate.

"I do not believe any man can run for President without some conflict with his Senate duties," Sen. Scott said. "But it'e not morally reprehensible, it's consistent with the system."

Egypt Stresses War

CATRO, Nov. 17 (UPI). Egypt's War Minister, Lt. Gen. Mohammed Ahmed Sadek, said today that Egypt could regala its occupied lands from Israel only by military means.

"We have no way ahead of us except regaining our land by force of arms," Gen. Sadek told reserve officers at the military academy. His speech was reported by the semiofficial Middle East News Agency.

"We are coming to a decisive period in our country's history," Gen, Sodek said. "This demands from all of us the maximum effort. Your sole aim is regaining the occupied land, no matter how expensive the sacrifice or the cost we will pay." On the political front, the newspaper Al Akhbar said a government official would fly to New York this week to prepare for Egyptian participation in the United Nations debate on the Middle East.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (NYT) .-Charlic Dale, 90, the deadpan partner in the vaudeville team of Smith and Daie, died yesterday morning at a nursing home in Tenneck, N.J.

The partnership originated at chance meeting. Joe Smith was cycling north on Eldridge Street on Manhattan's Lower East Side. Charlie was cycling east on Delancey. They met when their blcycles collided. As they argued over whose fault it was, the shopkeeper who rented the biles said: "You two sound like Weber and Fields."

That was the birth of the vaudeville team that was to headline at the Palace for years. It was 1393. Joe was 14 and Charlle, born on Sept. 6, 1881, on the Lower East Side, was 16.

Joe Smith was Joe Seltzec then and Charlie Dale was Charles Marks. The team of Seltzer and Marks worked for nothing, or close to li. They worked just about any place that would take

Rabbi Levin of Moscow Dies; Defender of Soviet System

MOSCOW, Nov. 17 (UPI).— Rabbi Yebuda Lelb Levin, 76, the Sovlet Union's most prominent Jewish clergyman, died ioday, the Soviet news agency. Tass, reported. He suffered from a heart ailment.

Rabbi Levin was often called the "chief rabbl" of the Sovict Union, although technically he was only the rabbi of Moscow's Grand Khoral Synagogue, the largest in the nation.

Rabbi Levin was an Orthodox Jew and an orthodox Soviet citizen. Like most high-ranking clergymen of all religions in the Soviet Union, he was a staunch supporter of Soviet foreign policy, In the case of Rabbi Levin, this support included strong anti-

Zionist statements and full public support of the Soviet policy in the Middle East. Official Campaign

In recent years, he joined in the official propaganda campaign against Zionist accusations that the Soviet Union mistreats Jews. In March, he organized a meeting of Jewish elergymen and Jewish community representatives who denounced Zionism and hailed the Soviet system. "We state before the whole world that our motherland, baying rid itself of capitalist slavery and national oppression, was the first to show the example in eliminating antl-Semitism and national strife," the statement said. "The very roots of this shameful phenomenon have been destroyed in the U.S.S.R." Rabby Levin traveled widely, attending international peace conferences as a representative of the Soviet Peace Committee.

Visited U.S. in '60s One of his trips took him to the United States in the 1960s where, at times, he faced tough questioning on the status of Jews in the Soviet Union. Through it all, he consistently defended Soviet policies and maintained that Jews enjoyed full religious freedom in the U.S.S.R.

Once, in 1965, a group of American rabbis were guests of Rabbl Levin's synagogue and one of them mentioned the state of Israel. Applause burst forth, and the stern, bearded rabbl had to rise and call for silence.

Later Rabbi Levin told the visiting Americans to "take back to America with you the wishes of the Soviet people for peaceespecially for the suffering peoples of Vietnam."

His official obituary, carried by Tass, praised him as a man known as an active fighter for peace and for the strengthening of friendship among peoples." Although there are about 2.2

million Jews in the Soviet Union, there are few rabbis. It will be difficult for the Grand Khoral Cengregation to replace him. There are no rabbinical schools In the Soviet Union, and there is virically no means of educating young men to the Jewish clergy.

Between Hunger and Famine

By Naomi Barry

KABUL (IET).—This is a stole land. Pride is the basic food and the Afghan grows tall on ii. Second staple of the diet; bread and tea. Nan and châl. The bread is flat and made of whole wheat flour. The tea is strong and black.

There has been drought for two years. The perennial state of "a little hungry" has been replaced by famine in a large area of the country. For the first time, Afghanistan has sent out a call for help.

The appeal did not fall on deaf ears: 255,000 tons of wheat are on the way—from the United States, Canada, Germany, the Common Market, the World Food Program of the United Nations. adds up to almost half the deficit, for a people who do not eat enough anyway.

The first shipments have arrived. More is at the Pakistani border. To bring the wheat to Kabul would require 320 trucks day. Fifty are available. Afghanistan is being strained in every direction, just to make the most of a gift.

The pressure is on from people at the bottom ciamoring for food and from those on top collapsing under the bottlenecks. Dr. Abdul Wakil — charming, enlightened, dedicated, trained as a horticulturist in Britain, minister without portfolio—is in charge of the Agriculture and Rural Development Authority.

The more he talked, the more it became obvious that the physical solution of getting the wheat to the starving peasants in the high mounta'n valleys has set off a chain reaction that may -with luck-overhaul the whole

The willing backs are here. A "Food for Work" program has already started. The Benefits of the Paris Social Season

By Hebe Dorsey

DARIS, Nov. 17 (IHT).—The Paris social season, sleepy so far, will soon pick up speed. Chic Parisians will have their choice of three premieres on November 23. First, there is "Barbe Bleue," a musical comedy at the Théâtre de Paris-the profits will go to the Asile de Nuit, an organization, headed by ad-vertising man Marcel Bleustein-Blanchet, that helps refugees and newcomers on arrival m France. Then, singer Dalida will open at the Olympia. But the choicest evening will be at the Châtelet where Mrs. Georges Pompidou will be patron of the premiere of "Double V," another musical comedy whose first-night proceeds will go to UNICEP.

To make this function doubly meaningful, each person who buys an opening-night ticket will also be paying for a ticket to the Cirque Amar, which will be given.

The gala to end all galas will be held Nov. 30 at the Opera, with the premiere of the film "Fiddler on the Roof" and a supper in the foyer. Organizer Georges Cravenne is asking his Tout-Paris friends to shell out 1,000 francs for the evening. But the event is sponsored by the Baron Edmond de Rothschild and the profits are going to the Malson de France at Jerusalem

University. We were a bit scared at the beginning," Mr. Cravenne said, "but we've already sold 350 tickets of the 500 available." Which tends to prove that the pampered and much invited Tout-Paris can be more generous than they are generally reported to be. On Dec. 2, a Rothschild party

But Georges Cravenne has begged milliners Paulette and Jean Barthet to please keep those hats nice and small. Pinally, on Dec. 16, the premiere of "Monsieur Pompadom," still another musical comedy, will be given at the Théâtre Mogador. This time, the profits will go to Mrs. Valery Giscard d'Estaing's favorite project: Le Noël des Enfants d'Aubervilliers — an undertaking that makes Christmas merrier for underprivileged children.

Georges Cravenne, mastermind of this whirlwind of parties, has no idea what Tout-Paris will do for amusement after all this. He, personally, is booked for a rest cure at Louison Bobet's Thalassothérapie Center in Quiberon, Britteny, where Stauros Nierchos got fit just before his recent wed-

> The earlier communique said that with its 51 percent of Farmitalia, another drug firm, the Carlo Erba takeover gave Mon! edison control of 10 percent of the Italian drug market.

It was reported that Montedison paid 10,700 lire (about $17) per ordinary share and 4.700 lire per preferred share.

Carlo Erba has 6 million shares outstanding, of which 1.8 million are preferred issue. The ordinary shares closed today at 10,610 lire, down from 10,900, while the preferred fell to 4,500 from 5,100.

The takeover is likely to anger critics of the recent sharp growth of state ownership of Italian industry. The state sees its role as one of promoting investment and strengthening faltering companies, hut Carlo Erba has shown good sales gains in recent years.

Montedison Itself only recently feli under government control through the open market pur-chases of its shares by the two giant holding companies. Cheerless News

The cautious buying trend evident during Phase 1 is hardly cheerful news for the Nixon administration. One reason for the sluggish recovery from the 1969-70 recession is the rejuctance of businessmen to expand inventories, a move that usually signals and hastens an economic upturn. Inventory expansion in recent quarters has been far less, an average increase of $3.3 billion this year, than the average $8 billion-a-quarter growth in the recovery period immediately following the four other postwar recessions, notes James L. Pate. senior economist for the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland.

Aside from some bright spots in the retail industry, executives say sales are generally slow and provide little incentive for stockpiling. Moreover, many suppliers are operating at low capacity, and quick delivery is no problem.

Small Profit Margin The prospect of saving 4 or 5 percent on an inventory item by buying before the freeze expired last weekend was not that attractive, purchasing men say, con-

fearful that existing prices are vulnerable to erosion in current

AMC Makes Profit After Loss in 1970

And Gets Permission To Raise Prices 2.5%

DETROIT, Nov. 17 CHT! .-American Motors Corp., the poor man of the auto industry, today reported a profit of $10.2 million for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30 compared with a loss of $66.2 million last year. At the same time, in Washington, the Price Commission said it has approved an AMC request to raise prices an average 2.5 percent.

The commission said the increase was "justified by allowable costs" and would not improve AMC's profit margin.

It also said Chrysler Corp. has requested a 5.9 percent price increase and that it has asked Chrysler for further information before reaching a decision. A 2.5 percent increase request from Ford was under study, the commission added.

In reporting its earnings today, AMC said the results would have been even better had it not been necessary to absorb the higher costs on 1972 models as a result of the price freeze.

The profits squeeze showed np in the fourth quarter, where earnings were down to $1.9 million compared to the $7.2 million of the previous quarter.

N.Y. Prices See-Saw, Dow Ends on Upside

By Vartanig G. Vartan

The sharp technical rally of yesterdar afternoon faded today, but several leading market averages still managed to post gains on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, behind by 3 points at mid-session, finished on the upswing as it rose 3.43 to 822.14. The Dow climbed 8.13 yesterday—a move analysts described as a rebound from the severe "oversold" condition that had pared 100 points from the blue-chip indicator since early September.

Declines nosed out advances by 730 to 601 as volume slipped to 12.84 million shares from yesterday's 13.3 million.

Ford Weighs Vietnam Auto

DETROIT, Nov. 17 (AP-DJ).-Ford Motor Co. said today it has proposed to the Saigon government a plac to assemble Ford vehicles in South Vietnam

The move, if approved. would make Ford the first major automobile manufacturer to establish operations in Vietnam. Ford did not give any details of its proposal or what type of vehicle it intends to produce, but the South Vietnam market would appear attractive for a "primitive" vehicle of the type the company plans to build in the Philippines: A low-cost car or truck without doors.

American Motors Corp. also said it is negotiating with a South Vietnamese manufacturer to assemble cars there. AMC declined to name the company, but said it expects a decision within a month.

The wide-swinging glamour issues benefited from short covering yesterday. The Big Ecord is scheduled to release its monthly short-interest figures after the close of trading tomorrow.

Chesapeake & Ohio rose 1/8 to 49 3.8. Yesterday, it plunged 11 3 4 in reaction to the railroad's omission of the fourth-quarter dividend. The C & O, a major coal hauler, cited the impact of the newly ended coal strike in omitting this payment. Kennecott Copper rose 1 1/8 to 24. Some observers attributed this gain to the resolution of the coal strike. Kennecott owns Pea-

The following is taken from the first Annual Report of WWTRUST, topies of which may be obtained from White, Weld & Co. Limited, P. & O. Building, Leadenhall Street, London, EC3V 4QH

WW TRUST, a Swiss company, was established in 1970 as a diversified, multi-national organization to achieve comprehensive geographical and functional coverage of international finance in Europe. Banking entities in the United Kingdom, the Common Market and Switzerland afford representation in Europe's three main financial markets and the nature of their operations ensures full vertical integration in the field of multi-national finance.

The first fiscal period ended June 30, 1971, represents a partial year especially since the major operations of the Group were acquired or initiated between September and January. While results have matched or exceeded expectations in all fields of activity, their evaluation must be conditioned by the relatively short span of time covered. The three main sectors of activity, investment banking, asset management and securities trading, made, pro rata temporis, contributions which are not dissimilar in size. The outlook for the Group's business remains favourable subject to reasonably orderly international monetary conditions.

Two Roman experts, Benito Garozzo and Giorgio Belladonna, could claim to be the world's best players. However, they have a stronger claim to the title of most-traveled. This year, their travels have included an American tour, a world tour and many tournament appearances in and around Europe. Later this month, Garozzo and Belladonna will team with four for an overtrick, other Italian experts in a try for the European title in Athens. From there they will fly directly to the United States, where the famous Blue Team will compete in two major events in Las Vegas. The diagramed deal was played by Garozzo in South Africa last June. Belladonna, as North, opened with one diamond in third position. Garczzo's jump to two no-trump following his original pass indicated a hand with about 11 high-card points, so North might have passed at that point. Instead he went on to three notrump.

With a normal heart division. four-four or five-three, South would have had no chance after a heart lead, for the defenders would have taken two aces and three or four heart tricks. But Garozzo was lucky and the sixtwo heart split gave him a chance.

West made the normal lead of the heart queen, which turned out to block the suit. East could not afford to play the king, since dummy's ten would then become a trick, and South correctly won with the ace. A duck by South would have allowed the defenders to disentangle their hearts.

A club was led to the king in dummy, and West ducked to pre-serve his entry. South cashed three spade tricks, ending in his hand, and led the club ten. When West perforce played the ace, the declarer had a good idea about the club distribution. A heart return gave East the lead he did not want. He returned a club-a diamond would have been no better-and South finessed the eight. The remaining club tricks brought South's trick total to eight, and the lucky diamond position allowed him to make two tricks of the last three,

WILLIE MASTERS' LONESOME WIFE By William Gass. Rustrated. Knopf. Unpaged. $3.95.

Reviewed by Nathaniel Tarn

REVIEWING a novella of so when he is One and moving few pages affords the luxury smoothly as a stream."

(note the undertone, please) of The echoes, deliberate or other to the control of reread as well as read-that reread without which, as Roland Barthes points out, no critical act is ever possible. But Barthes discusses narrative, and just what does this book narrate?

A woman of uncertain age-

she may be 30, she may be as much as 60—has been a stripper. is the wife of one Willie Masters, suffers and will suffer the embraces of anonymous and indiscriminate men. Her thoughts, both angry and lyrical, reach us through the whole armory of contemporary stylistics: split texts cut-ups fold-ins switches of speaker, mirror-effects, allenations Much of the humor in the book emerges from her memories of what clowns and comedians said while, before, and after she stripped, and from a sketch she acted in as "Olga," involving a husband who recognizes her only by peering under her skirts. This serves as inverted paradigm to the plot since the female is recognized by her sexual organs whereas the males sink into anonymity through the behavior of theirs. The plot also involves the husband finding his penis in a bun—a sufficient indication of just how the men make themselves all alike.

The author inserts himself into the stream of consciousness, commenting from time to time on the process of his authorship, warning us when we fall into traps and even playing at insulting us when he feels we may have done him too much justice. But the real hero, and here William Gass exemplifies the contemporary thrust of the text away from writer and over into the reader's court, is in fact this very reader; the male animal, though not exclusively, as Lesbian possibilities are not discounted. The author leads us to understand that we are making love to the book. And the duration of the reading is co-terminous with that act of love: "Our life is the time of our body which is the space of our life." What have we here now: reread? replay? relove? Scriptor ludens has us The original Tri-Quarterly Magazine edition-with its fullnude front cover and full-nate back-view on back cover-made the point graphically more cer-tain than this edition does. But the text is clear: "I feel sometimes as if I were imagination... —imagination imagining itself imagine"; "You are your body... and the poet is his language"; "I'm only a string of noises after all" or "You, the world; and I, the language" are all spoken by our heroine.

The lonesome wife is, plainly, poetry lonesome for the poet: if she is truly courted and loved instead of insultingly "had," she will respond accordingly and save the language. It is scarcely to be wondered at if we find a paean to Poets' Liberation in the book or if it ends with a call to a new stylistics. Apollo has made it with his Daphne; the Muse is truly incarnate at last: a woman of language and tongues. And the poet mystically "experiences his speech as he does himself when he's most fit, wise, named or not, number Shakespeare (so often, indeed, one begins to wonder about Willie Masters), Dante, Dryden, Joyce, Hardy, Baudelaire, Stein, Apollinaire and Beckett: an elitist passel of worthies for such a seemingly impoverished whore. That Gass often writes beautifully to match, with a strange lyricism of the inner body, its organs and fluids, and certain lovely half-fashioned windows onto blind landscapes outside the room, does not serve to conjure away all doubts as to the genre intended. There is residuel coyness in the novelist toward poetry: "Dear me, Scraps of old poems. They keep wandering around like ghosts, hoping to get use some-And the author at times day." tries to parry in advance the charge of gratuitousness with unpersuasive claims on the clown's comic genius and the poet's liberty. However this may be, the amount of arbitrary cogitation going through the woman's mind seems heavy for such a short work

And the ultimate purpose per-haps is paradoxical also: because Molly Bloom exists, we are compelled to ask whether this can be more than a footnote. For the whole of literature lies before us, don't you see," a voice cries among the lovers: the struc-turalist refusal to close any text is much in evidence. Precisely because of this aperture, however the novella is strained to break-ing point—lovely prose poem as some of it writes itself to beand the whole concept bears its burden with less patience than the heroine bears her lovers.

Newcombe First

Blue is the fifth pitcher to win both the Cy Young and Most Valuable Player honors. Don New-combe did it in 1956, the year the Cy Young Award was initiated. The others were Sandy Koufax, in 1963, Boh Gibson, 1968, and Denny McLain, also 1968.

He is the fifth pitcher to win the American League MVP since the award was first issued 40 years ago. Hal Newhouser won it twice, in 1944 and 1945. The other pitchers to win the MVP were Lefty Grove, 1931; Spud Chandler, 1942; Bohhy Shantz, 1952, and McLain, 1968. Bine is the first Oakland player to win the MVP and the first member of the A's to receive the honor since Shantz won it in 1952, when the twice-transplanted fran-chise was in Philadelphia. Bando, the Oakland third baseman who hit 271, slammed 24 home runs and drove in 94 runs, was named on all but one of the Frank Robinson hit 281 with

USLTA Will Offer Plan To End Tennis Dispute

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (NYT) .-Paced with increasing pressure from both sides of the net, top officials of the United States Lawn Tennis Association have huddled here this week to seek a formula that would preserve open tennis for next year.

Robert B. Colwell of Sentile, the USLTA president, said the assoclation would present n plan to the International Lawn Tennis Federation meetings later this month in London that, he hoped, could avert a split between the nntional associations and World Championship Tenuts.

"I'm not at liberty to discuss our intentions," Colwell said, speaking for the association's nine-member management committee. Austrian Gets a Kick Out of Football

By Kenneth Denlinger

DALLAS, Nov. 17 (WP).-Toni Fritsch developed a cauliflower ear getting used to his football helmet, and he does not know a cornerback from a strong safety. His employers, the Dallas Cowboys, are not fretting, though, because he can place kick a ball from here to there about as well as anyone.

Until several months ago, when two Cowboy scouts just happened to be in his neighborhood in Vienna, Fritsch hod never seen a football, something that did not bother him. He was perfectly content being an Austrian soccer hero, with two goals against the English national teum in Wembley no less.

Fritsch became a Cowboy shortly after going nine-for-nine from 30 yards, eight-for-nine from 40, six-for-six from 50, six-for-nine from 55 and sending a few kickoffs over the fence of a Vienna soccer field. He will be on display Sunday in RFK Stadium against the Redskins, having kicked five of eight field goals from various distances since being unfettered by Dalias two comes ago.

Coach Tom Landry cut eight-year veteran Mike Clark, fourth-leading active National Conference scorer, in favor of the 26-year-old Austrian. Yesterday, one of Clark's friends flew a plane over the Cowboys' practice field with the sign: "Tom, we wont Clark."

Pritsch looked ot the sign and said: "Tomorrow, I hring the nir force." The Cowboys appreciate Pritsch for his innocent humor as much as his kicking, which he claims will get

In his six months in the United States, Pritsch and his wife, Scnya, have learned n good deal of English from watching television. When he and Landry were having communication problems on the sideline once, Fritsch said, "Whot do you want, good grammar or good kicker?" A witness swears it happened. Fritsch produced the winning three points, with a 26-yard kick, in his professional debut, against the St. Louis Cardinals, and was two for four Sunday against Philadelphia. After one of the misses, Eagle Nate Ramsey ran by and told him there was no room in the NFL for another soccer player.

"What does he know?" Fritsch said. "Seven years ago I played before 100,600 people and he thinks that (playing before a mere 60,178 Texas Stadium would make me nervous "But this kicking is not so easy, though.

When you don't play, you don't learn. When you think, you miss. You should just go and kick."

As evidence to doubting Ramseys as to his toughness. Fritsch sald his right leg has been broken in two places, and a tricky operation was necessary to repair damage to the right thigh area.

Landry and Cowboy vice-president for personnel development Gil Brandt conducted a clinic-in Vienna-for Fritsch shortly after the signing, with Landry playing center and snapping to Brandt.

Still, Fritsch's knowledge of the game remains vague, and he has been told to avoid contact whenever possible on kickoffs. At 5foot-7, Fritsch is the shortest Cowboy. At 185 pounds, he is not the lightest. If consistency on field goals is a problem, Fritsch was kicking off into the end zone against the Eagles, something he had not done against St. Louis. What, he was asked, would he do if the snap from center sailed into his hands instead of the holder? "Why I would just run it right into the end zone," he said, as if any dummy should know that much about the game.

PORTLAND, Ore. Nov. 17
(UPI).—The Milwaukee Bucks rolled to their ninth straight vicrules, trade deadly insults and hint broadly that the other will try to slip a horseshoe into his man's glove. Yet, when Argelo Dundee and Joe Fariello got together with Max Swindocky, an inspector for the Texas State Bureau of Lahor Statistics-that's the Southwestern equivalent of a boxing commission—not a voice was raised in dispute.

Regarding the make of gloves to he worn, the amount of gaute and tape allowed bandages, the scoring system to he employed, all was sweet accord. In Buster's interests, Fariello suggested that Texas had one licensed referee whom he'd rather not see in the ring. He added quickly that he wouldn't want to embarrass the man hy identifying him.

Conflict of Interest

"Tell us why you object to him," a newspaperman said. "If I did, you'd know who he was." Fariello said. Later the man was identified as Jimmy Webb, who formerly boxed for Angelo Dundee's hrother Chris and, Farlello thought, might concelvably have some conflict of

A: Because one department of the government never knows what the other department of the gov-ernment is doing. The Environ-mental Protection Agency, which worries about clean water, is against phosphate detergents because they cause algae to grow in the water. The surgeon general is for phosphate detergents because they are safer for children to eat than caustic detergents without phosphates in them. Q: Where do the soap companies stand?

A: They can go either way, at least in their advertising campaigns. When the first publicity shout phosphate detergents made the headlines, all the soap compenies announced they had new nonphosphate products that would save America. Now that phosphates have the surgeon general's approval, the soap companies are

> Q: What is the soap companies solution to entrophication, the process which closs the water with algae?

A: The scap companies solution is for each community to build new sewage-disposal plants to screen out the phosphates. Q: Isn't that more complicated

A: Yes, it is, but soap companies don't have to pay for the sewage plants.

What is the surgeon general's argument for housewives going back to phosphate deter-

A: His argument is that 85 percent of people using phosphate detergents are not contributing to water pollution. Only 15 percent of the population, mostly around the Great Lakes, are guilty of eutrophication. Ecology people opposed to phosphates say the surgeon general is all wet. Any time you discharge phosphates into water, they affect the quality of water hundreds of miles away. The lakes of 32 of the 50 states show signs of dying from phosphate-fed algae.

Q: Who is the housewife to be-Heve?

A: That's a good question. The housewife has to make a choice between clothes that are whiter than white or water that is cleaner than clean.

Q: Are you trying to say we must all choose between what we wear and what we drink?

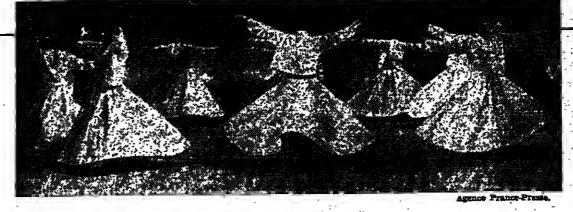

A: Something like that, We have been brought up in this country to believe that clean laundry is next to godliness. But we now have scientific proof that people can live longer drinking clean water than they can wearing clean shirts.

Q: But won't a housewife be pilloried in her neighborhood if her husband'e shirts aren't sparkiing white?

A: That is the biggest myth of all. Nobody wears white shirts any more.

Q: If a housewife didn't want to use phosphate detergents and she was afraid of using nonphosphate detergents, could she use laundry soap?

A: What's laundry soap?

The Dervishes Are Whirling in London

By Karl Signell

ISTANBUL, Nov. 17 (IHT).-The Mevlevi (Whirling Dervishes) of Konya, Turkey, will perform their ritual for the first time in London tonight.

They have performed in Europe before and have never failed to cause a stir be-cause they offer a rare opportunity to see a relatively enthentic Mevievi ritual. The audience is likely to include, along with the general public, students of Islamic studies, Oriental mysticism and musicology. The founder of this mystical brotherhood was the 13th-century poet and Sufi, Jaial al-Din Rumi. Persians and many other Moslems revere Rumi as the author of the "Masnavi," "The Koran in the Persian Tongue." Turks refer to him simply as Meviana, Our Lord.

Doctrine

The Meylevi order of dervishes are inspired by the teachings of Rumi-his humanity, his hope, his mystical doctrine of oneness and his glad acceptance of death. The ceremony is fraught with symbolism expressing these ideas: the shroudlike capes and tall hats, the bowing and embracing, the imaginary Hat4 Istipa, or Line of Unity. The singing in the ceremony is mostly based on poems selected from the Masnavi or other writings of Rumi. The origin and significance of the ritual is best summed up in an old Mevlevi tale:

"One day Mevlana was passing down a road when he happened upon a goldsmith plying his craft. The rhythmic blows of the hammer struck a responsive chord in the sage's consciousness and he was transported into a state of mystical rapture, spinning around slowly in front of the goldsmith. This is the origin of the sema (whirling) ritual."

This story contains two basic dervish concepts. One is the attaining of religious ecstasy through dancing, borrowed from Central Asian shamanism. The other shows the very powerful role of rhythm in help-ing to attain that state.

The very essence of the Mevlevi rite is the rhythmic aspect. The compulsive rhythms of the kudum (small kettledrums) not only overwhelm the listener, but impel the dervishes' feet to move. In terms of tempo, the ceremony can be seen as one great crescendo, unfolding almost imper-ceptibly from the peaceful opening of the neat to the driving purion semai, then tapering off again.

The musical "movements" of the ceremony are clearly defined by distinctive rhythms. The calm naat and solo flute improvisation at the beginning are in a recitativo style-in free rhythm. The instrumental peshrev, or processsional, in this particular ceremony calls for a rhythmic cycle of 28/4 (if that boggles the mind. think of it as a 4/4 in andante). The first "movement" (selám) of the ceremony proper is in 8/4, the second is in 9/4. The third "movement" begins to pick up tempo more perceptibly as it passes through three different rhythmic modes: 28/4, 10/8 and 6/8 (the 6/8 is the yuruk semai). At this climactic point, the head dervish joins in the whirling for the first time. The fourth and final movement in this case is identical to the second. Although this particular music was composed in 1885, the form and style differ little from those dating back to the 18th century.

Flute

The most dramatic moment of the long ceremony is probably when, during the second and final fast 6/8 music, all the dervishes including the head dervish are whirling. The music of the drummers, singers and musicians stops, but the dervishes, in their state of ecstasy, continue their soundless spinning. The voice of a solitary flute slowly brings them back to

"reality," ending the ceremony proper. There may follow some optional hymns and reading from the Koran.

The ney, or reed flute, is the most important instrument after the drums. The symbolic Line of Unity has the head dervish at one pole and the head finist at the other. On the nature of the ney and its "soul's sorrow at being parted from the Divine Beloved," the Masnavi has this to say: Hearken to the reed flute, how it When complaining of the pains of separation-Ever since they tore me from the reed bed, My plaintive notes have moved men and women to tears

Musicians

Some of the highest ranking musicians from Turkey will be sitting in the mutrip (musicians' corner) when the Mevlevi perform in London. Guests at the ceremony might keep an ear cocked for solos by Nivazi Sayin (ney), Selami Bertug (ney), Necdet Yasar (tanbur, a long-necked lute), to say nothing of the unique voice of Kani Karaca (naat reciter).

The London audience may have the good fortune of hearing, after the ceremony is concluded, a recitation of the Koran by the blind hafiz, Kani Karaca. After this recitation, or a hymn perhaps, there is one final moment to be sayored. After the exchange of the Moslem salutation "seldminaleykim" and its answer, "aleykim-selim," the evening closes with the dervish word for The One, a single long, drawnout "HUUUunu
